THEATER CLOSING RULE IS MODIFIED

Fuel Administrator Storrow Will Allow Leeway of 15 Minutes and Perhaps More in Cases of the "Legitimate" Houses

Theaters are to be permitted to remain open until 10:15 p. m., if their programs so require, and, when an unusually long show is to be given, until a later time by special permit. This modification of the ruling of James J. Storrow, New England Fuel Administrator, which is to go into closing among other amusement places all billiard rooms, bowling alleys, saloons, dance halls, etc., was made at the conclusion of a hearing given by Mr. Storrow to theater managers and employees at the State House today.

Motion picture houses will close not later than 10 p. m., as the order originally provided. No special dispensation will be given to them.

The legitimate theater operator egreed to commence their evening performances not later than 7:45 in order that they may complete them by the specified time. They pledged themselves to do their utmost to arlange their programs so as to close by 10:15 o'clock, the general closing

Mr. Storrow and David A. Ellis, chairman of the Boston Fuel Committee, listened to arguments of theater proprietors and employees that the regulations should be modified so as not to interfere with their programs, as the original rules would do, in one of the hearing rooms of the suite occu pied by the State Committee on Public

John B. Shoeffel, president of the Theater Managers Association of Boston, and other theater men, claimed that to close the theaters at 10 p. m., would force many to close altogether and seriously affect others Mr. Storrow pointed out the serious ness of the coal situation and told of the numerous factories, including some producing war supplies, that were being forced to close altogether or shorten their hours. It was a question, he said, of supplying either homes, schools, factories and other essentials, or theaters and other non essentials.

Diversion of Coal

Committees Told to Take Shipments for Homes

Directions today are being received by local fuel committees of Massachusetts from James J. Storrow, State Fuel Administrator, to divert shipments of bituminous coal destined for manufacturers, to homes, where the emergency warrants. The letter, a copy of which was sent Thursday to General Newsevery local committee in the State, says in part:

"If your city is in a manufacturing section, some soft coal is probably coming in by rail quite frequently convery much diverting any of this coal, (Continued on page six, column three)

SUFFRAGE FAVORED IN TWO COUNTRIES

United States House of Representatives Votes for Submis-Britain for Equal Franchise the report.

It is a notable fact in the history of the woman suffrage movement that on the same day, a resolution submitting the federal woman suffrage amendment to the several states should have been carried in the United States Congress, and an amendment designed to prevent the extension of the franchise to women should have been rejected by the House of Lords in the United Kingdom. In the United States, the question now goes to the Senate, and, in the event of the amendment being carried by that body, it will go to the states. In the United Kingdom, the defeat of the anti-suffrage amendment removes another obstacle to the passage of the Representation of the People Bill, in which the plan for extending the franthise to women is incorporated.

Victory by One Vote

House of Representatives Passes Amendment: 274 to 136

WASHINGTON, D. C .- In one of the most closely fought voting contests of many years, the resolution submitting the federal woman suffrage amendtoday unanimously adopted the Borah ment to the several states was adoptd in the House of Representatives on Thursday by a vote of 274 to 136. is necessary to carry any constitutional amendment, therefore one more negative vote would have made necessary Speaker Clark's deciding vote. It was known, and the speaker had openly announced, that, should his vote be necessary, he would vote in favor of the amendment. Therefore its adoption was certain, even though one more opposing vote had been cast. So narrow was the margin of the vote that a recapitulation was demanded.

The measure was debated for six general debate several amendments were offered. Representative Moores, of Indiana, offered an amendment pro-posing that the ratification of the amendment be determined by referendum rather than by its submission to the legislatures of the legislature was introduced by those opposing the adoption of the resolution. The favorite theme used as a basis for opposition to the amendment hinged around state rights and on the Republican side the necessity of standing by the party platform.

Among those who argued for the amendment's adoption were: Repeagentatives Cantrill. Lenroot, Rankin, Raker, Taylor of Colorado, Blanton,

"is. Dyer, Little and Campbell of Kansas. Representatives Gard. Parker of New Jersey, Greene of Massachusetts, Small, Hardy, Stafford. Heflin and Meeker were among those who argued against the amendment.

Congresswoman Jeannette Rankin of Montana opened the general debate for the adoption of the amendment, followed by Representative Raker of California, chairman of the new House committee on woman suffrage.

Practically every member was in his seat and all of the visitors' galleries were massed with hundreds of women from all parts of the country Closer attention was given the amendcome before the House for a long time. street level.

BRITISH ATTEMPT AT DEFINITION OF GERMAN WAR AIMS

Mr. A. J. Balfour Tries to Set Forth Enemy Objects in War -Outlines What Would Happen Under German Peace

pecial cable to The Christian Science Monitor from its European Bureau EDINBURGH, Scotland (Friday)-The Rt. Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. addressing a crowded meeting here pany Can Get Plenty of Men yesterday varied the method of President Wilson, Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Asquith by attempting a definition of Germany's war aims. He began by saying that there was nothing in Messrs. Wilson and Lloyd George's quith. On the other hand, the nearest their war aims was the admission that it might be a good thing if arrangements could be made to avoid future

Mr. Balfour suspected the sincerity of this statement, but it perhaps showed an improved tone. Before the Germans had learned what the war really could mean for them, it was a commonplace for the German powas a part of God's pre-ordained arrangements on earth, a great instrument of progress, that the triumph of method of true progress and that success in battle was a true measure of merit. That Germany could do even slight spiritual improvement.

"At this moment," Mr. Balfour, however, went on, "the German youth was being hurried to slaughter, German industry imperiled everywhere, German finances embarrassed and German debts piled up to prevent the wrong done by Germany in 1871 being redeemed, to prevent Belgium being restored to the position her guardian found when she outraged Belgium's of Italian unity being carried to completion, to prevent another great wrong done in 1772 by the Kaiser's aims, Mr. Balfour said they were to restore Arabia and Mesopotamia to Turkey, to put Jerusalem again under Constantinople, to hand over Greece to those who had betrayed her, to prevent the remedying of the sufferings of Rumania, Serbia and Montenegro, to prevent these national elements of the Central Powers too long oppressed under the German notion of Kultur and Government from having their own lives restored to their own traditions, and to carry out in their own way their contributions to the common

As to a league of nations, Mr. Balexpenses the company expects all ardly to shrink from them. But they league of nations would require to be > effective. Mr. Balfour then made a historical survey of that league of nations called the Holy Alliance, which left the name of infamy, he said, for the dynastic selfishness and reactionary folly of which it was severally and collectively guilty. He pointed out, however, that the Napoleonic and revolutionary wars, which had devastated Europe from end to end, were traced by the Holy Alliance to the factor of revolution, to revolutionary armies, and to generals who were the children of > revolution. The statesmen of the Holy Alliance, therefore, argued plausibly that as revolution had been the cause of all their troubles, they must take care that there should be no revolution and no war. They forgot that there were things for which they had to fight and ought to fight. Liberty, they forgot, nationality, they hated, with the result that the Holy Alliance perished.

It was for this reason that they must first have that arrangement of territory which should not too grossly violate equity and freedom. A German peace would leave all over Europe centers from which morbid effects would flow. It would leave France with Alsace-Lorraine unredeemed, Poland with a maimed and dismembered community. Italy with its great work of unification imperfectly accomplished, the East with large fractions under the alien and most sterilizing and often brutal rule of the Turk, Armenia a helpless sacrifice, Greece surrendered to those who had already betrayed her and nothing done for the Great Slav populations of Eastern Europe. "That would be a state of things," he said, "in which you would never get a league of nations to work properly. You cannot bring together the great and small powers of the world and say 'Now it is your business to see that the boundaries are not violated, that intrigue in this or that country is not going to spread the conflagration of an international war,' unless beforehand you so arrange matters that the stability of the national sys-tem is national stability, based upon morality, justice and freedom, a de

Lord Curzon closed the debate with a remarkable speech which shows the difficulties of ministers in the National Government in time of war. His speech divided naturally into two parts, the first being a most slashing attack on woman suffrage and the second being a vigorous warning to the Lords on no account to reject women suffrage He remained unconvinced that it was either desirable or wise to add

6,000,000 female voters to the electorate. The proposed change was vast incalculable and almost catastrophic, without precedent in history and without justification in experience. Women did not have a steadying influence upon the fortunes of the State. Everywhere, the female parliamentary vote gave an immense stimulus to Socialism, which always caused him considerable alarm. American and British Methods Followed With Good Results -Appeal Made Through New National Picture Posters

By special correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

PARIS, France-Something new in dvertising is shown to the people of France in connection with the efforts made to popularize the new loan. Formerly it seemed to be considered alst enough to announce a loan with some great speeches in Parliament and then to lay it before the public in a more or less formal manner, and with a good commendation. In the fourth year of the war, when efforts are tightened in every direction, this is not considered sufficient, and France has been deeply impressed with the advertising methods, first of England and, much more latterly, of the United latter. tates. For some time past articles ave appeared in all the newspapers describing the various methods that have been employed in America for making the call to the people for their assistance in various forms, and in cases reproductions of posters upon the occasion of the new loan which at the time of writing is underand it seems with much sucthe process of flotation, it was determined to follow the American and British examples, and, if possible, to improve upon them. The thing has been done very well and impressively. Not only the artists, but other classes of the specialized and expert comes have been drawn upon for their willing assistance. Anybody who can do anything to promote the success of this extremely important financial operation has been asked for his or er assistance, and the results have

M. THOMAS AND THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS M. Albert Thomas, the leader of the French Socialists and an ardent supporter of the war, has been pushing in France the idea of a league of nations as actively as Mr. Asquith is pushing it in England. . M. Thomas emphasizes two points. First, that the war aims of France being based upon justice, not upon expediency or power, must not be extended with military success. Whatever victory France might be able to gain, her demands must still be limited to "her right to a bill on which the possibility of a Alsace-Lorraine," and she must regeneral election depends. ### PROSPECTS OF THE BRITISH REFORM BILL

Special to The Christian Science Monitor of the representation of the people's bill.

As the bill nears its third reading in the House of Commons, she writes, the question naturally arises as to its prospects in the House of Lords. His own opinion on the question, however, had not changed, he said, and he maintained that every one was still at liberty to speak and vote as they liked on the subject.

We do not underestimate, continues the writer, the perils that will surround the women's clause up to the very moment that it is passed by the House of Lords; but we find it difficult to believe that the peers, who are essentially statesmanlike in their outlook, and not likely to be swayed by passion or undue prejudice, will fail to indorse so vital a part of the compromise arrived at by the Speaker's Committee. The departure from that compromise, embodied in the widening of women's municipal franchise, is likely rather to reconcile anti-suffragists to women's parliamentary enfranchisement than otherwise.

To sum up, she concludes, we have to admit that there is still need for the greatest vigilance on the part of suffragists, that there are still opportunities ahead for delay, of which the enemies of the bill may avail themselves, that the women's fate will remain uncertain until the House of Lords has ratified the decision of the House of Commons. But, on the other hand, we are nearer victory than ever before. The New York success shows how opponents may swing round in two short years. Lord Curzon's statement in the House of Lords was not that of a man who meant to urge his fellow peers to upset the Speaker's compromise, though he reserved his right as an honest man to vote according to his own opinions. As the writer says, the proclamation points to one thing and one thing only -revolution-and as he says, the contingency referred to is not difficult to guess at, viz, that if Germany can render the necessary assistance by landing rifles, the opportunity for rebellion is to be taken. He states that he believes this has been twice tried unsuccessfully, and he thinks a third time will come. Germany will merely use Ireland as a pawn, and the fate of Ireland is nothing to her in the event of failure. He draws attention to the warning of the Irish Roman Catholic to prelates, priests and parents to keep the young men away from "a criminal and futile propaganda," and ends his own letter with a similar appeal.

Members of New York Mayor's Committee of Women Announce. Course in Co-operation With Extension Work

Special to The Christian Science Monitor from its Eastern Bureau

NEW YORK, N. Y.-The Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense has announced the opening of a "War-Time Training Course for Volunteer Social Workers," to be presented in cooperation with the Department of Extension Teaching of Columbia University, in a series of 12 lectures to be given at the Hotel Biltmore on Tuesday and Friday afternoons, commencing Jan. 15. Herbert N. Shenton, instructor in sociology at Columbia, is to supervise the course which, in addition to the lectures, will include 30 hours of observational work spent in weekly tours to various types of social agencies and municipal institutions contributing to social relief; assigned readings, original problems and written examinations; and, also, 150 hours of field work with a state or municipal institution or generally recognized private institution. Certificates will be given to members of the class who are graduated. Holders of these will then be placed in active volunteer service by Miss Virginia Newcomb, executive secretary of the Columbia University Committee on Women's War Work.

This course is to be given, so the committee announces, in response to the plea for trained volunteers on the part of the many social organizations in the city. New York City alone is reported to require 500 social workers who will give their services. Many women have been eager to do such work, but have not been fitted for it because of lack of training. Coincident with the addition of a clearing house for volunteers, through which any social organization may obtain volunteer workers and through which a volunteer may obtain work, has come the urgent necessity for the establishment of professional standards in volunteer service. The list of lecturers include men and women well known in social service work, among them, Miss Lillian D. Wald, Mrs. Mary K. Simkhovitch, Bailey B. Burritt, William Doherty, former Deputy Commissioner of Public Charities; Miss Mabel H. Kittredge, and others.

Agriculture had suffered from nothing so much as from its being comparatively unorganized. He had been Minister of Agriculture in a War Cabinet, but he had found that when he wanted to present the views of agriculture, his colleagues in the Cabinet had challenged his authority for regarding those views as representing agriculture as a whole. He denied that the proposed council would in any way detract from the influence and usefulness of the existing bodies. The scheme, so far, was only in skeleton form, but it was something to work upon and mold into shape, and this would be the task of the representatives forming the Provisional Council or Provisional Committee. The desires and interests of Switzerland go much further than this. Unfortunately, however urgent it is to save coal through the use of electric power, the war conditions render is very difficult just now to carry out the electrification of long stretches of line. ### QUESTION OF FOOD SUPPLY IN ITALY

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

ROME, Italy-The question of the food supply of Italy has long been a matter of serious consideration alike to the authorities and the people, and the public, on the whole, seems to have readily accepted the necessity for rationing. Prices are high and the statistics issued by the Bulletin of the Public Works Department show an increase since August, 1914, of from 52.77 to 106.54 per cent in the cost of foodstuffs in the principal towns of Italy. The towns which show the smallest increase are Naples and Girgenti, while Bologna heads the list. In Rome, prices have increased 67.74 per cent, in Milan 72.14 per cent, and in Florence 81.83 per cent. The figures for Milan, being based on the prices of the Cooperative Society, are slightly lower than the actual average retail price, and the rise in prices in that city cannot, at the present time, be far short of 100 per cent as compared with those of August, 1914. Six communal kitchens are in working order in Milan at the present time, under the control of the Cooperative Society, and it is probable that two more will soon be added to their number. Kitchens of a similar description will probably soon be opened in Turin. The prefect of Milan has announced that declarations as to all stores of wheat, rye, and maize must be made, together with a

Why You Are Not Paying 30 Cents for Sugar

Market Quotations-Raw Sugar and Refined Granulated Sugar-Years 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918

In April 1917 the cables told of a plan proposed by Herbert C. Hoover, then in London, which he described as "a plan by which the Allies can consolidate under one head the whole purchasing of food staples from our market, and not only will competitive bidding be abolished, but by co-operative buying on our side we can arrange the proper balance between the rights of producers and consumers."

This plan was favorably received by the sugar refining industry, which had been on a war basis almost from the beginning of the European War.

The war had brought the Allies into the Cuban market, resulting in severe domestic and international competition with no increased supplies. Naturally prices of refined sugar, both to the American public and to the Allies, rose under this forced draft.

Domestic sugar refiners, since the outbreak of the European War, not only have safeguarded the United States supply but have maintained the lowest sugar prices in the world.

This brilliant record is due largely to the fact that sugar refining is in the hands of large business units, with an excess of refining capacity sufficient to supply all domestic needs, and so far all demands of foreign countries.

In the spring of 1917 there was a serious attempt at the disorganization of the sugar refining industry, following a long series of attempts at destruction of sugar ships.

Accompanying these incidents were widely circulated sensational reports predicting a sugar famine and sugar shortage, causing widespread apprehension.

At that time, even with the assurance of ample supplies on hand, retail sugar prices rose in some sections to 20 and 25 cents a pound.

The efforts of the American Sugar Refining Company to allay public alarm, to check hoarding, to accept a price less than that which it could easily have secured, and to distribute its product fairly and evenly among the trade, were of real public service.

While there were great supplies of sugar in far-away Java which ordinarily would have gone to Europe, yet the necessity for saving ships became so great that Europe turned to Cuba for even larger supplies than previously.

It takes a cargo ship 150 days to make a round trip between England and Java, while a round trip between England and Cuba can be made in 50 days.

Under these circumstances and seemingly to avoid paying proposed United States war taxes on refined sugar the European Allies purchased in Cuba the sugar which ordinarily would have come to the United States in the fall months.

These conditions, and especially the necessity of saving ships, led the United States and the Allied Nations to urge upon the sugar industry the adoption by voluntary agreement of the original Hoover plan, under the authority of the Food Control Act, passed August 10, 1917.

The cane-sugar refiners and the beet-sugar producers unanimously agreed to the Hoover plan as a patriotic act in the interest of the American people and as an aid to the

This is the significance of the appointment by the United States Food Administration of the International Sugar Committee to which the Allies send representatives for England, France, Italy and Canada, and to which the United States contributes three members.

Upon the success of the operation of the International Sugar Committee under the directions of the Allied Governments, acting for practically half the civilized world, will depend the readjustment of the world's sugar markets.

This plan is full of promise to all the nations party to the convention.

It is an assurance that sugar, although comparatively cheap in view of war conditions, will not by reason either of competitive or speculative activity be increased in wholesale price.

Sugar will become stabilized in price with sufficient profit to producers, refiners and merchants to maintain and stimulate production and to cover the cost of refining and of distribution.

The marketing of Domino Cane Sugars in cartons and small cotton bags by this Company has helped amazingly during the pinch of the fall months in giving a wide distribution among the retailers of the reduced sugar supplies.

While a barrel formerly was the unit of the grocer the same amount of sugar put up in cartons and small cotton bags can now be divided between two or more grocers and so serve a larger number of people and prevent hoarding.

It will be necessary for grocers and consumers to watch carefully their distribution and purchases during the approaching period of readjustment. The refineries are now starting up and supplies of raw sugar coming forward, but it will take weeks, and possibly months, for the return of normal conditions.

Housewives can aid in conserving the sugar supply by buying these package sugars.

In war time and at all times it is our aim to safeguard the interests of the public we serve.

Until the end of Queen Anne's reign, we know the furniture of the various periods simply by the name of the sovereign under whom it was produced. It is only with the advent of Chippendale that the individual designer lends his name to his productions. During the earlier years of his career, Chippendale made furniture in the tradition of Queen Anne, with cabriole legs and splat backs for his chairs. But, even at this time, there was a noticeable difference between his designs and the Dutch-English furniture that had been in vogue. His tendency was toward refinement and elaboration; he lightened proportions, decorated his pieces with the carved ornament of which he was a master. The backs of the chairs, which had been hoop-shaped, were now squared up at the corners, the solid splats were pierced to form strap-work patterns. either flat or carved, and the cabriole eg was usually carved at the kne with a lion's head or a masque, terminated in a claw and ball foot.

The French phase of Chippendale's work is chiefly displayed in the elaboration of his chair backs, although it had its effect on other pieces, and tended toward lightened proportions and more graceful and spirited contours. The elaborately carved, ribbonbacked chairs are good examples of his French manner. Other favorite chair designs were the pierced splatback, the interlaced back, and the ladder-back, the latter being one of the most charming of the simpler chairs.

Gothic influences are to be discovered in the traceries of the glass doors of his china cabinets and bookcases. Both of these pieces of furniture, under Chippendale's hand, grew to exceptionally large proportions. In many cases, they were made in three divisions, the central one projecting slightly beyond those at the sides. There are Gothic chair backs, toothough less commonly than French or Chinese-sometimes filled with delicate Gothic fret work, and sometimes showing characteristic Gothic pointed arches between the divisions. Legs, formed by a cluster of slender members, are suggestive of the clustered columns of Gothic architecture.

Mention has already been made of contours of cabinet tops, small pierced paper, a monotone with little irregular of 2 eggs until still, and 1 tablespool And so it is that we find the cabinets with pageda tops, chairs in the cabinets with pageda tops, chair legs and seat, Chinese with Chinese fret backs, and tables lattice or fret work, either pierced,

New Hours for Milk Men

Another ancient tradition has passed, in Baltimore, where milk delivery has been put on a permanent afternoon basis. In that city the point is forever gone from one of the perennial jests of the funny men. The visit of the milk-man at 4 a. m. was always a prolific source of low comedy material, but it will never again seem funny, in Baltimore, except in a mel-ancholy, sentimental fashion. Thus times change once reliable themes. The labor agitator in the coal-mining districts, for instance, unless he wishes to make his hearers laugh, will now agitate for something else than higher wages, with many of his hearers receiving $300 a month or more in pay, and coming in an automobile to

One of the Finest Displays in the White Sale Is the Snowy Nainsook

Philippine Lingerie—Every Stitch Made by Hand Now it is within the limitations of practically every woman's purse to indulge in this dainty, practical, handmade and embroidered wear, especially when it can be had at White Sale prices.

Many months ago we realized that this wear would be raised in price and perhaps its quality standard reduced, so we laid in an unusually large stock.

That is why in this great white sale, Philippine wear of the orginal first quality nainsook is so well represented. That is why the garments are all in that full, wide style, cut so generously and perfectly.

Hand scalloping marks every edge, top and bottom of combinations, sleeves and top of gowns. All the hems and seams are done by hand, besides the sprays, which are in the most individual and delicate designs.

Envelopes and gowns are $2.95, $3.95, $5 and $5.95 up to $7.50 for envelopes and $25 for gowns. Skirts are $5, $6.95 up to $12,50.

ECONOMIC POSITION IN SWITZERLAND

al correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

ZURICH, Switzerland-Reports pubished by the Federal Government show that Switzerland is experiencing great difficulties in her import trade. Today she is almost entirely dependipon Spanish vessels, whose capaity is quite inadequate for her needs. At one time it was possible to charter 10 or 11 steamers a month, with a carryng capacity of from 50,000 to 55,000 ons. But this tonnage is no longer available, nor is there any immediate prospect of improvement.

Freight rates are steadily rising, heavy merchandise from the United States costs 27 francs per 100 kilogrammes, and from the Argentine, 31 francs. Grain rates are 45.50 francs per 100 kilogrammes. This is an enormous increase compared with the pre-war rates of 1.50 and 2 francs. Under foreign pressure, Switzerland s constantly obliged to restrict her exports of goods more and more, and o give guarantees to the belligerents hat she will not supply wares to the opposite camp. This has brought her nto an extremely critical situation, and any further measures of the kind will make her condition almost intolere. THE State of New York has had 100 years of seesawing and changing her mind about the canal and, at the end, has spent over $100,000,000 more to bring her old Erie system up to George Washington, an excellent surveyor and engineer, approved heartily of the project of uniting the waters of Lake Erie with those of the Hudson, and Gouverneur Morris, an early statesman, foresaw the time when "ships would sail from London through the Hudson River to Lake Erie": but ground was not broken for the canal until 1817. But the great canal system of Nev York lost its prestige, first as the plaything of politicians, and, later, in competition with the railroads, which missed no opportunity to injure its reputation. Finally, it was recognized that, if the Erie Canal system was to be perpetuated, it must be enlarged and modernized, and that is what has been done the last few years, at an expenditure of $100,000,000-a fortunate thing now that the strain upon the railroads, especially for carrying grain, coal, metals and other bulky has loomed largest in public attention, during the last decade, has been the Panama Canal, connecting the Caribbean Sea with the Pacific Ocean. Politically and commercially, it has been regarded as having an importance that could not be foretold. It is the realization of a dream centuries old, at 4 the last finally successful effort in a long chain of abortive attempts. When Spain, in the Fifteenth Century, with great possessions on this side of the Atlantic, considered a survey with a view to opening up a waterway across the isthmus, the Governor of Panama objected on the ground that it would be "in opposition to the will of the Almighty, who had placed this barrier in the way of navigation, between the two oceans.'

The Panama Canal is linked with the Suez Canal, in the purposes for which they were built and the effect upon shipping.

THE history of Suez goes far back into Egyptian times. At various times, the projects were abandoned and the canals permitted to fill up. When Napoleon invaded Egypt, he revived the plan for the establishment of a maritime canal and ordered a survey to be made. At that time, it was generally be-lieved that the Red Sea was 30 feet higher than the Mediterranean, but careful levelings across the isthmus showed them to be practically the same height. Napoleon did not build the canal, however, and de Lesseps presented his scheme to the Viceroy of Egypt. It was delayed by political opposition, until an International Commission recommended the route which was afterwards adopted, the necessary capital was raised and the work was

At what period the Chinese began to dig canals, there is no authentic record to prove. Sometimes it seems as if these remarkable people must always have had canals and other works, so long have they been famillar to them and so well established have they been as a part of the country as the men from the Occident first visited it. One thinks of the Grand Canal of China and the Great Wall of China together, although, of course, they have nothing whatever to do with each other, except that they are ancient and remarkable works of the

The New "Benevolences"

It would be interesting to know whether the Government of the United States at the present moment is vested in the President and Congress or in the selfappointed canvassers and collectors for the Red Cross movement. That this is not a ridiculous question is beyond question. But that it should be necessary to ask it is the greatest proof possible that the little cloud no bigger than a man's hand, but black, all the same, with intolerance and domination, which was alluded to in these columns little more than a week ago, as beginning to cast its shadow over the United States, has since then begun to rain like the cloud that came up out of the sea

From all over the country reports are coming in of what is little less than the terrorism which is being displayed in raising subscriptions for the Red Cross. Now, in the first place, if the Red Gross needs to have subscriptions raised in this way, it must be in a parlous condition; and, in the second place, if a great institution for the alleviation of suffering connives at being supported by threats, it would appear to be somewhat in danger of having lost its vision. There is, however, a far greater issue at stake than the Red Cross, and that is the freedom of the United States, and it is a question the Government had better take cognizance of at once, for it is not a question that is going to be allowed to drop. Only the merest fragment, no doubt, of the intimidation which has been practised can reach one particular paper, but the information which has reached this paper is quite sufficient to show that the intimidation is widespread, and perhaps the most delightful instance of this intimidation has been an intimation, gently conveyed, to this paper that another well-known paper, in another town, is about to institute a campaign against it, and to make an attack upon it for pro-Germanism. We would suggest, therefore, to those responsible for running this journal that they had better either suppress the spirit of autocracy which seems to have mastered part of its editorial force, or else that they should commence the campaign at once, before the cold fit comes.

There is no lack of instances of the way in which this campaign of intimidation is being carried out. One company in the South brought all its force to bear upon a woman stenographer, with the polite information that she had better "subscribe or get out." This chivalrous and courageous intimation, in the name of the whole company to one woman, was made in spite of the fact that the culprit, out of her comparatively scanty earnings, had already subscribed and paid for one of the first issue of Liberty Bonds, and was, at that very moment, engaged in paying for two of the second issue, and moreover had also joined the Thrift Club, and done her best to promote legitimate thrift.

The whole of the honor of these proceedings is not, however, confined to the South. Examples may be taken from almost anywhere. For instance, there is the case of the two farmers of Nebraska who were assessed by the local Red Cross Committee at $50 each, and who, believing this to be a Government assessment, demurred to the amount and offered $25 as the utmost they could afford, and, on the rejection of this offer, paid the full amount, and then placed their case before the Federal District Attorney, only to be informed that the Government had made no such assessment, and had nothing whatever to do with the matter. There is nothing to be gained by piling up instances, but there are innumerable cases of people who, having objected to being forced to contribute to an institution designed for the prevention of suffering, have been faced with the threat that their conduct would be reported to Government officials, and that they would be regarded as pro-German. It need not be said that nothing has come of these threats, for the all-sufficient reason that they were founded on nothing but the ill temper of unsuccessful olicitors. At the same time the man or woman who lives in some quiet street, and who knows nothing whatever of public or civic affairs, is as easily persuaded as, and even more easily intimidated by threats of such a nature than, a Nebraskan farmer. There is, as everybody knows, a deep abyss of fear in the unknown.

Now, the great weapon which has been used in this campaign is the word "pro-German." And this makes it necessary to ask who is the person nearest to the gospel of Kultur, a woman earning a scanty living as a stenographer, who has paid everything she has into the Liberty Loans, and who is endeavoring to support the great thrift campaign, or the gentleman who knocks at her door and demands a dollar, which she has not got, with less ado than the old-fashioned highwayman, and when that fails threatens her with the loss of her employment by way of encouragement. The world will remember how one of the greatest fighters for liberty, humanity has ever known, dealt with this manner of encouragement. When King George caused Admiral Byng to be shot for cowardice of which he was most certainly innocent, Voltaire summed up the proceedings in that withering sentence, that the King had done it pour encourager les autres, to encourage the others. Now there is a great deal more than gold, silver, or paper, in the money which goes to mitigate the sufferings at the front. There are those unpurchasable qualities, compassion and love. But what compassion and what love does any human being suppose is to be found in subscriptions levied by bullying and by threats? It has been stated before in these columns, and we wish to repeat it, that this paper has no animus whatever against the Red Cross. It has never attempted to prevent a single dollar going into the Red Cross collections for legitimate purposes. It realizes to the full the compassion and love of those people who subscribe, out of their affluence, and even more out of their poverty, to try to lessen the sufferings of those who have gone out to fight for the liberties of their native land. But it has protested against the use of funds so gathered for vivisection, in a quite proper and legitimate manner. The charge against it, therefore, of pro-Germanism or want of patriotism is so infinitely silly that it will be instantly dismissed by anybody with a knowledge of how to read, who will consult its columns. If, indeed, it is to be in future obligatory to be a vivisectionist to be patriotic, patriotism will soon become as veritable a scullion as ever Falstaff insisted honor was.

Since, however, the protest was lodged against vivisection, the question has assumed a far different aspect. It has become a question not of patriotism at all but of liberty. Free people have always been opposed to "forced benevolences." They cost Charles I his throne and his life, and the descendants of the English revolutionaries who came to this country rather than bow the knee to intolerance at home, and their descendants who fought the Revolutionary War rather than yield again to the long arm of intolerance reaching across the Atlantic, are not likely to be enamored of autocracy under the cap of liberty any more than under the government of absolutism. The United States can, without an effort, get all the millions it wants for carrying on the most righteous war that ever was fought, and can endow the Red Cross with all the millions it may need for its works of mercy in the field, but the citizens of the United States are no more likely to welcome being forced, by selfappointed taxgatherers, to subscribe to charities than their ancestors were to being compelled to subscribe to wars by forced benevolences.

Reconstruction

In a certain square of London, where wealth and poverty are oddly thrown together, is a statue of Shake-speare bearing the motto, "There is no darkness but ignorance." The average reader of that significant phrase upon the pedestal has usually been one of the flotsam and jetsam of society stretched upon a bench. Dejected, miserable, perhaps, he has little dreamed that a few more years will see that motto placed before mankind as the working basis of a radical reform of society. Reconstruction is unavoidable after the war. The defeat of Prussianism must be followed by another order of society, upon which will be raised the masonry of a new and better world.

More or less discussion of this inevitable social reconstruction is abroad. One hears many suggestions as to the future use of the present munitions factories and their almost countless employees: as to the returned soldier, the position of women, agricultural problems, the future development of independent food supplies, the new relations of capital and labor. All this is good and necessary. But Mr. Barnes, Labor member in the British War Cabinet, "hit the nail on the head," in his recent statement anent reconstruction, when he said that a nation can be properly guided and controlled only according to the standards of Christian ethics. He might have added that no nation can be so controlled until its citizens substitute good will, honesty, and national well-being for selfishness and private gain, whether that so-called gain accrue from the liquor traffic, from unfair manipulation of capital, or from unjust wages. For the reconstruction of an never precede the reconstruction of the individual. What then, is of primary importance is the making over and readjustment of the man and the woman, of letting in light where there has been the "darkness" of "ignorance." All education is not of books, and war is a stern teacher. The reconstruction of the individual will not wait till the enemy surrenders. It began in August, 1914, and the white searchlight of a new strength and a new fellowship is, even now, dispelling the "darkness" of much that was due to ignorance and narrowness.

Already there is more than a hint of personal reconstruction visible in the readjustments of character and point of view. Before the war, the average man took much of corporate life for granted, and slipped its responsibilities on to other shoulders. Today he has seen the disastrous consequences of a national conscience intrusted to an autocratic few, and he is more awake to his own responsibilities. He takes less for granted in national life; he is inquisitive; he investigates; he thinks and inquires; he overturns a cabinet and deposes a tzar, or hands railway systems over to his government in the interests of efficiency and universal service; he shuffles off luxuries and qualifies his definition of "necessities" for the purpose of thrift and economy. Soon there will come the demand from labor for the right to direct its work, through a common basis of understanding between employers and workmen.

Men are learning, as they never learned before, the true value of cooperation and the real meaning of unity. To quote Mr. Barnes: "All classes have struggled together in the war and have come to see more than ever how stupid and wasteful is competition as compared with cooperation." Exactly! In making munitions, in operating railways, in conserving supplies, in putting a shoulder to the agricultural wheel, men have worked together as never before, with good and speedy results.

The world is finding out that collectivism and true democracy go hand in hand. Class barriers are falling fast, and the general leveling before the exigencies of war has happily been, broadly speaking, toward better and higher standards than before. If there has never before been a period of such material destruction and horror, there has never been a time, in the world's history, of such collective and individual courage, of such splendid personal heroism and self-sacrifice as are now being witnessed. Trivialities have sunk, in the individual life, into their true position in the face of great needs, and larger and purer ideals and new efforts and determinations have taken their place. Men are learning afresh that no one can live to himself alone. The gains are a deeper sympathy and a truer sense of comradeship in both the individual and the national life. It is by utilizing all the gains the war is bringing in its train that the nations can attain real unity or blossom to their fullness.

Suffrage Carries in the House

THE joint resolution, before the United States Congress, submitting to the legislatures of the several states the so-called Susan B. Anthony amendment to the Federal Constitution, insuring to women an equal political footing with men, was adopted by the House of Representatives on last evening. There had been a strong probability of such action for some time, but the outcome of a meeting of a committee of Democratic representatives with the President, at the White House on last Wednesday night, made this result practically certain. At this conference "the committee found," according to its authorized report, "that the President had not felt at liberty to volunteer his advice to members of Congress in this important matter," but that "when we sought his advice he very frankly and earnestly advised us to vote for the amendment as an act of right and justice to the women of the country and the world."

This has been called a complete reversal of President Wilson's attitude on suffrage, but the facts do not warrant so sweeping a statement. The President has long favored suffrage, but until Wednesday night he had consistently adhered to the position that suffrage should be won through the action of the states individually, and to buttress this position he had made it a point to refer to the suffrage plank in the platform on which he was elected. In a word, the President has favored equal suffrage all along, although he has differed from the suffragists as to the manner of bringing it about. At the White House conference, the other night, he is said to have justified his change of view, as well he might, on the ground that woman suffrage had become a war measure, that Great Britain, and more recently Canada, had come so to regard it, and that the United States could no longer withhold from women what they so insistently and logically claimed as a right, in view of their devoted patriotism and their unquestioned usefulness in the carrying on of

This is not the first time the President has changed his views, or permitted the force of circumstances and events to change them, and it is not the least of the things which the people of the United States have to be thankful for that his views have always been changed for the better. They have properly and naturally changed with changing conditions, as have those of millions of his fellow-citizens during the last three and a half years, and as these views have changed they have become clearer and broader.

It now remains only for the Senate to concur with the House in order that the legislatures of the several states may have the opportunity of acting almost simultaneously, and promptly, on the questions of federal equal suffrage and federal prohibition.

Limerick

"Derry stands for Derry Walls: Limerick for the Bridge of the Broken Treaty." The statement seems to be just enough, for, although the walls and the gates and the 'prentice boys of Derry are better known to most people than the Thomond Bridge and the Treaty Stone of Limerick, still the two sieges and what followed them are the great landmarks in the history of two counties. It was after the Battle of the Boyne. The Irish army, under the command of the Frenchman Lauzun, for James had fled the country, retired behind the Shannon, and William's victorious progress southward met with no resistance till his forces approached Limerick from the Tipperary side. At Limerick, however, he quickly discovered that he had to measure swords with no ordinary soldier. Lauzun had had no heart for the fight. He had taken one look at the fortifications of the city, and, muttering to himself that such walls might be "battered down with roasted apples," had retired into Galway. His place, however, had been taken by a man of very different metal. Patrick Sarsfield had no thought of giving up the city without a struggle, and, when William's army finally took up its position on the ridge of Singland, it found the old town grimly determined on defense. It was no question of a blockade, as it was with Derry. The next seventeen days were full of incident. William was slow and methodical. With him it was a question of concentrating sufficient force against the city, in the way of artillery, to reduce it without much loss. Sarsfield pinned his faith to a bewildering rapidity of movement, and the story of how he and "Galloping Hogan" slipped out one night with a few followers, went across Thomond Bridge, struck up the valley of the Shannon, suddenly fell on one of William's artillery trains as it approached the city, destroyed everything in sight, and then returned through Clare to Limerick, contains the central episode of the siege.

Finally, of course, Sarsfield won, and William was obliged to retire. But this outcome was only a respite. A year later Aughrim was fought and lost, and Sarsfield was again locked up in Limerick. This time he was forced to surrender, although on his own terms. The treaty which was signed at the head of the Thomond Bridge secured certain definite rights to all who had followed James, whilst he himself left the city at the head of his men, drums beating and colors flying, and more than 10,000 of his soldiers took ship with him for France, to enter the service of King Louis. "It was the first flight of the Wild Geese." Looking back from this central point in Limerick's history, its annals still cover centuries. Many people insist that Limerick is the Regia of Ptolemy, and the Rosse-de-Naillagh of the Annals of Multfernan, and that St. Patrick visited the city in the Fifth Century. Be all this as it may, when the curtain rings up certainly on its history it is a Danish settlement, and the Danes and the Irish are fighting each other, as they did, off and on, for many centuries for possession of the famous island, in the midst of the Shannon, which formed the nucleus of the city. At last, in the Tenth Century, Brian Boroimhe came against the Danes with a mighty host, and finally drove them into the sea. And so from 1106 until its conquest by the English, in 1174, Brian Boroimhe and his successors reigned in Limerick as kings of Thomond. Henry II gave the kingdom to Herbert Fitzherbert, in 1179, but the city was frequently in the possession of the Irish chieftains, and, as time went on, it developed into a great and prosperous seaport, with its merchants and its traders and its overweening desire to outdo its rival, Galway. In the Seventeenth Century, some years before the siege, it reached perhaps the height of its prosperity, but, from the time of the siege onward, as one writer has put it, Limerick has no history. And yet today it is a prosperous city enough, and nothing can take away from the beauty of its situation. It lies at the extremity of the richest tract of Ireland, the Golden Vale, which intervenes between the Shannon and the Galtees, great stretches of rich country, whilst beyond it lie the hills of Clare and Tipperary.

Oh Limerick is a beautiful city as everybody knows, The river Shannon, full of fish, close by that city flows.

And so, as a certain writer has said, one may go from the bridge leading out of the English town to the Irish town, and follow up the long street-long and winding with the curves that show one has not here a planned city, but a village casually grown into a town-past alleys with windows opening on them from houses that stood there in the time of the siege, and so out to St. John's Gate, on which are still to be seen the "flakes and scars" made by William's artillery.

Notes and Comments

THE history of the famous gilded-bronze horses of St. Mark's coincides with many upheavals in the history of old Europe. Thomas Coryate, who "set going for Venice the fourteenth of May, ano. 1608," gives the story of them as he heard it from the Venetians of his day: "Some say that they were cast by Lysippus . . . about three hundred years before Christ; some say that the Romans made them at what time Hiero King of Syracuse triumphed of the Parthians. It is reported that Tyridates, King of Armenia, bestowed them on the Emperor Nero ... and that Constantine the Great brought them from Rome to Constantinople and therehence, they were lastly brought by the Venetians, when they possessed Constantinople. 'So greatly did the Venetians esteem the 'foure goodly brasen horses," adds Coryate, "that although they have been offered for them their weight in gold by the King of Spaine, as I have heard reported in Venice, yet they will not sell them."

NEARLY two centuries after Coryate had written his "Crudities," "for the encouragement of Gentlemen and lovers of travell to undertake journeys beyond the sea," the "brasen horses" of St. Mark's were removed from Venice by Napoleon and placed on the arch of the Place du Carrousel. Francis of Austria restored them to Venice in 1815, and there they remained through all the troublous times of the Italian War of Independence. In the year 1917, in the midst of the tumult of war, the horses have returned to Rome, whence they are said to have started their peregrinations in the Third Century

THE proclamation calling for the observance of a National Labor Loyalty Week in the United States, in connection with the celebration this year of Lincoln's Birthday anniversary, under the auspices of the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy, should have a hearty response, since one of the principal purposes is to combat "the insidious forces of pro-German and anti-American propaganda." There is, however, no occasion for suspending necessary work in order to observe the week. The best possible way to observe it, in fact, is to increase the output of products that are essential to the winning of the war. Nothing will hit the pro-German or anti-American propaganda more powerfully than an increase in the shipment of supplies to the front and to the

THERE is weariness attached to the reading of a good deal that appears in the papers nowadays. Added to what censors, controllers, and all the other officials tell you about what you are to do or not to do, you find the journalist thinks it necessary to add his bit. The public good-humoredly puts up with all this admonition, and pays just as much heed as it likes. Certainly in the matter of speech it intends going its own sweet way, sprinkling the conversation with military terms with an unction worthy of that blessed word Mesopotamia. Sometimes it is quite clever, like the girl sorter in a government office who addressed her pal on this wise: "Why don't you speak plain English? Putting up a barrage like that all round your real meaning. Camouflage is all right when it comes to deceiving the Boches, but you needn't dig yourself in so deep when it's only me you're talking-to."

AN INVESTIGATION, in New York, shows that Germany's cause has been silently, though effectively, pleaded through the medium of "Kultur" books offered free to the public in the circulating libraries. Consequently, the public libraries will probably be carefully surveyed, with the object of eliminating all literature designed to spread German propaganda. Germany herself showed the way in the right disposal of war literature. At the outbreak in 1914, she began collecting and classifying, in Berlin, all the books, pamphlets, newspaper articles, illustrations, posters, cartoons, and what not relating to the war, no matter the country of their origin, until she now has one of the finest libraries of war literature in existence. England and the United States are proceeding along a similar line. Why not remove the offending books to the war library at Washington, for the benefit of future historians?

THERE is good sense as well as gallantry in the suggestion made by a Vancouver newspaper that Mrs. Ralph Smith, the first woman candidate for the Legislature of British Columbia, should be accorded election by acclamation. Time and money will be saved by the adoption of such a course, for her election, by an overwhelming majority, even if it shall be contested, is generally conceded. Mrs. Smith, by the way, is appealing to a constituency that was formerly her husband's. It is hardly necessary to say that she is sound on every national issue.
